SIGHTSEEING SALT LAKE CITY
Zion, the city of Saints, capital of Utah, is the most interesting of the pioneer cities who had their homes on the hills. It is a center of historic enterprise, natural beauty and historic interest. It is notably well laid out, with wide, straight streets, shaded by trees, and bordered by running mountain water. Within the city what usually first is inspected by the visitor is Temple Square, containing the chief public buildings, the state capitol, the state and assembly halls, the square and the Beehive and Lion House, formerly the headquarters of Brigham Young, and the new Administration Building. The State Capitol Building, built of Utah granite stands on an eminence at the head of State Street, overlooking the city, and contains a museum of natural resources that is well worth visiting. Fort Mifflin, a military post, is located on the bench of Mt. Olympus, three miles east of the city, and can be reached by auto or electric car. The one hour and fifty minutes interval between the arrival of Rio Grande and departure of Western Pacific No. 1, 11.15 a.m. (Mountain Time) and 12.05 p.m. (Pacific Time), affords the through traveler an opportunity to see the principal places of interest in Salt Lake City and to enjoy the stop to the fullest extent.

Grand Cañon of the Feather River

Between Weso and Alazon, Nev., tracks of the Western Pacific are used jointly. All eastward trains of both companies use Western Pacific track. Weso to Alazon, and all westward use Southern Pacific track, Alazon to Weso.

Now You're Going to HAWAII

BECAUSE now you can go in new luxury and comfort and with speed all the way—on the Malolo, one of the world's great ships—and because you can rest and play at one of the newest and most beautiful of hotels, The Royal Hawaiian at Waikiki Beach.

The Malolo is not alone the smart way to travel to Hawaii—it's also the swiftest route—only four days from San Francisco's Golden Gate to Honolulu's Golden Shores. And within a few hours' journey are the rare and varied allurements of Kauai, Maui and Hawaii, isles of enchantment.

The Malolo sails from San Francisco every other Saturday. Seven other Matson liners afford weekly sailings from San Francisco to Honolulu and sailings every 21 days from Seattle or Portland. To the South Seas and Australia, every 21 days.
